VOL. XI. NO. 6.

CROSSFIELD, ALBERTA, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 8th, 1918.

PRICE $4 A YEAR.

WM. LAUT HARNESS --- -- REPAIRING

During the month of February our Mr. Potter will devote his entire time to HARNESS REPAIRING.

We would esteem it a special favour if those of our customers who have HARNESS IN NEED OF REPAIR would bring it in during the next three or four weeks so that all may be in readiness for Spring work.

Our Repair Department does not guarantee to make new harness out of old, but we do guarantee to do all that can be done in a first-class shop.

Our STOCK OF NEW HARNESS is now arriving and though prices are undoubtedly high, we feel that they will stand comparison with any other house.

We respectfully solicit Your Inspection.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

To Our Subscribers:

It is a well known fact that the cost of everything has almost doubled in the last two years.

The Printer and Publisher has to pay for the necessities of living and materials along with the rest. Yet your local paper has remained one dollar a year.

Before the war the dollar rate was unprofitable, it costs more than that to produce a decent country weekly paper.

The war has made the old rate of a dollar quite impossible. Paper, ink and other articles have jumped beyond all reason.

The country weekly papers all over the Dominion have almost all raised their prices long ago, and we have come to the conclusion it is imperative on our part to do so.

We therefore give you all a chance to at least put it off a little longer. All who pay their subscription before the 1st of March next will get the benefit of the dollar rate, after that the price will be $1.50 a year in advance. We ask those in arrears to pay up.

We wish to thank you all for your loyalty and support and hope for a continuance of the same. We are pleased to inform you that the circulation of The Chronicle keeps increasing week by week. Yours truly,

R. WHITFIELD.

Replace Your Buggy With a Ford

MORE than 100,000 Fords are owned by people in Canada in preference to the old horse-drawn buggy and other makes of cars.

Your neighbors, and farmers in every section of the Dominion are abandoning their old buggies—selling their driving horses and buying Fords.

Ford cars are utility cars. They are built to endure the strain of constant daily use over rough roads.

These are the tests every farmer gives his car. The Ford meets them in a satisfactory manner. It is the farmer's car, so why not replace your horse and buggy with a Ford?

Featherstone Changes His Plans

Was getting dark and a keen wind blew across the ragged pines beside the track, when Jake Foster walked up and down the station at Gardner's Crossing in North Ontario. Winter was moving southwards fast across the wilderness that rolled back to Hudson's Bay, silencing the howling rivers and calming the stormy lakes, but the frost had scarcely touched the sheltered valley yet and the roar of a rapid throbbed among the trees. The sky had the crystal clearness that is often seen in northern Canada, but a long trail of smoke stretched above the town, and the fumes of soft coal mingled with the aromatic smell of pines. Gardner's Crossing stood an outpost of advancing industry, on the edge of the lonely woods.

The blue reflections of big arc-lamps quivered between the foam-flakes on the river, a line of bright spots, stretching back along the bank, marked new avenues of wooden houses, and across the bridge, the tops of tall buildings cut against the glow that shimmered about the town. At one end rose the great block of the Hulton factory, which lost something of its utilitarian ugliness at night. Its harsh, rectangular outline faded into the background of forest, and the rows of glimmering windows gave it a curious transparent look. It seemed to overflow with radiance and filled the air with rumbling sound.

In a large measure Gardner's Crossing owed its rapid development to the enterprise of the Hulton Manufacturing company. Hulton was ready to make anything out of lumber for which his salesmen found a demand, but his firm grip on the flourishing business had recently relaxed, and people wondered anxiously what would happen if he did not recover from the blow that had struck him down. Fred Hulton, his only son, and assistant manager to the company, had been found in the factory one morning with a bullet-hole in his head, and it was believed that he had shot himself. His father gave his evidence at the inquiry with stern self-control, but took to his bed afterwards and had not left it yet. So far as the townfolk knew, this was the first time he had shown any weakness of body or mind.

The train was late, but Foster enjoyed the pipe he lighted. It was ten years since he landed at Montreal, a raw lad without friends or money, and learned what hard work was in a lumber camp. Since then he had prospered, and the strenuous life he had led for the first few years had not left much mark on him. Now he thought he had earned a holiday, and all arrangements for his visit to England were made. Featherstone, his partner, was going with him. Their sawmill, which was run by water power, had closed for the winter, when building material was not wanted, and the development of a mineral claim they owned would be stopped by the frost. They had planned to put in a steam engine at the mill, but the Hulton company had delayed a contract that would have kept the saws running until the river thawed.

Foster, however, did not regret this. Except on Sundays, he had seldom had an hour's leisure for the last few years. Gardner's Crossing, which was raw and new, had few amusements to offer its inhabitants; he was young, and now he could relax his efforts, felt that he was getting stale with monotonous toil. But he was a little anxious about Featherstone, who had gone to see a doctor in Toronto.

A whistle rang through the roar of the rapid and a fanned beam of light swung around a bend in the track. Then the locomotive bell began to toll, and Foster walked past the cars as they rolled into the station. He found Featherstone putting on a fur coat at a vestibule door, and gave him a keen glance as he came down the steps. He thought his comrade looked graver than usual.

"Well," he said, "how did you get on?"

"I'll tell you later. Let's get home but stop at Cameron's drug store as you pass."

Foster took his bag and put it in a small American car. He drove slowly across the bridge and up the main street of the town, because there was some traffic and light wagons stood in front of the stores. Then as he turned towards the sidewalk, ready to pull up, he saw a man stop and fix his eyes on the car. The fellow did not live at the Crossing, but visited it now and then, and Foster had met him once when he called at the sawmill.

"Drive on," said Featherstone, who touched his arm.

Although he was somewhat surprised, Foster did as he was told, and when they had passed a few blocks Featherstone resumed: "I can send down the prescription tomorrow. That was Daly on the sidewalk and I didn't want to meet him."

A minute later Foster stopped to avoid a horse that was kicking and plunging outside a livery stable while a crowd encouraged its driver with ironical shouts. Looking round, he thought he saw Daly following them, but a man ran to the horse's head and Foster seized the opportunity of getting past.

"What did the doctor tell you?" he asked.

"He was rather disappointing," Featherstone replied, and turned up the deep collar of his coat.

Foster, who saw that his comrade did not want to talk, imagined that he had got something of a shock. When they left the town, however, the jolting of the cars made questions difficult and he was forced to mind his steering while the glare of the headlights flickered across deep holes and ruts. Few of the dirt roads leading to the new Canadian cities are good, but the one they followed, though roughly graded, was worse than usual and broke down into a wagon trail when it ran into thick bush. For a time, the car lurched and labored like a ship at sea up and down hillocks and through soft patches, and Foster durst not lift his eyes until a cluster of lights twinkled among the trees. Then with a sigh of relief he ran into the yard of a silent sawmill and they were at home.

Supper was waiting, and although Foster opened a letter he found upon the table, neither of the men said anything of importance during the meal. When it was over, Featherstone sat down in a big chair by the stove, for the nights were getting colder. He was about thirty years of age, strongly built, and dressed in city clothes, but his face was rather pinched. For part of the summer, he and Foster had camped upon their mineral claim in the bush and worked hard to prove the vein. June, as often happens in Canada, was a wet month and though Featherstone was used to hardship, he sickened with influenza, perhaps in consequence of digging in heavy rain and sleeping in wet clothes. As he was nothing of a valetudinarian he made light of the attack, but did not get better as soon as he expected on his return and went to see the Toronto doctor, when Foster urged him.

The latter lighted his pipe and looked about the room. It was warm and well lighted, and the furniture, which was plain but good, had been bought, piece by piece, to replace

Germans Start Press Campaign

Fear Austria-Hungary Will Demand an Early Peace

The correspondent of the London Daily News at Rotterdam writes: There are indications that a campaign is on foot, the aim of which is to make Austria more than ever the mere vassal of German militarists, with the immediate purpose of securing for the western front the help of her armies now largely set free by events in Russia.

The German government knows the Austro-Hungarian peoples are war-weary and that their desire for peace will be intensified by the armistice negotiations with Russia. The feeling must be changed by a great press campaign, which is now being organized. It must be proved to the Austrian people that war in the words of the Vossische Zeitung "must be carried to a successful conclusion by Germany and Austria together, not only with all their military, but also with all their political forces."

The price of success is struggle—but the struggle can be minimized and success made reasonably sure if you work that God-given faculty, your mind.

under articles they had made at the mill. One or two handsome skins lay upon the uncovered floor and the walls were made of varnished cedar boards. A gun rack occupied a corner, and the books on a shelf indicated that their owners had some literary taste, though there were works on mining and forestry. Above the shelf, the huge head of a moose, shot on a prospecting journey to the North, hung between the smaller heads of bear and caribou.

The Kitchens Must Win

Mr. O. H. Van Norden, chairman of the Speaker's Bureau of the United States food administration, in a recent address declared that the outcome of the war must be decided in the kitchens of Canada and the United States during the coming year.

"It is up to America; it is up to Canada," he said, "to supply the great quantities of foodstuffs that our allies must receive this year, and if we do not, if we fail them, the war is going to end, and it is not going to end in the favor of the allies and in our own favor."

No Bran or ShortsAllowed Exported

Farmers' Feed Supply Will Be Provided

In order to assist in the campaign for greater production of food animals, the food controller announced that not a ton of bran and shorts will be allowed to be exported until the Canadian requirements are fully met. The food controller is also considering the question of fixing prices for such feed, but in any case it will be made available to the farmers at the lowest possible price and the profits of the dealers may be fixed as soon as information from the several provinces is secured in response to inquiries which have been sent out.

The government refused to allow the exportation by a large milling company of 143 cars of bran and shorts, but purchased them and sold them to farmers without any charge for the government's service. Applications for such feed should be addressed to the food branch of the department of agriculture, Ottawa. Mr. Hanna stated that, if necessary to insure the farmers obtaining feed supplies, the government will take total output of mill by-products and distribute it. He added that action would be taken at once in case of complaints that the mills were requiring the purchase of flour with the offals. This practice must be discontinued.

A separate feed branch of the Dominion department of agriculture is being established in Winnipeg to serve Western Canada.

There is no more effective vermifuge on the market than Miller's Worm Powders. English Labor, After Taste of Better Conditions, Will Not Recede

Lord Leverhulme, head of a great English soap industry, the capital of which is 200 millions, has very pronounced views as to the effect of the great war on the future position of the nation's workers. Lord Leverhulme is himself a model employer, having provided for his work people a model town in which they live under delightful social conditions, and having provided also facilities by which they may secure direct financial interest in the concern in which they are wage earners.

"It may, I think, be taken for granted," he says, "that when peace is restored workers will not be willing to return to pre-war conditions of wage and living. I am convinced they will never consent to go back to them."

"The war has altered many things; it has broadened our horizon; it has given us new points of view; it has clarified our thought; it has introduced radical changes into our social, industrial and commercial systems. "Most of them have for the first time tasted and enjoyed the sweets of life, the full fruits of labor; they have grown accustomed to a higher plane; their pleasures and advantages; they will strive to remain at that level and, if possible, rise above it, and with this aspiration I am in full sympathy and accord. And if, after the war, any attempt should be made to thrust labor back into the depths from which it has ascended it would be, in my opinion, not only a disastrous economic blunder, but a policy akin to crime against civilization and humanity."

An Unhappy Inference

Didn't Care for Theological Works of Any Description

A student assistant, engaged in reading the shelves at the public library, was accosted by a primly dressed middle-aged woman who said that she had finished reading the last of Laura Jean Libby's writings, and that she should like something just as good.

"No," was the reply. "I don't care for theological works."

"But," explained the kindly assistant, with needless enthusiasm, "this cardinal was a bird!"

"That would not recommend him to me," said the woman, as she moved away in search of a librarian who should be a better judge of character as well as of Laura Jean Libby's peers.

Rye Flour Mills

Winnipeg is to have a rye flour mill, which will furnish another available substitute for wheat flour. The mill will have a capacity of 100 barrels per day, grinding both spring and winter rye. This flour will be put up in 98, 40 and 24-pound bags, and will sell wholesale at the same price as second patents flour, or $5.35 per 98-pound sacks in less than ton lots delivered in Winnipeg. A mixed flour, partly rye and partly wheat, will also be manufactured.

$100 Reward, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one druggist who has been able to do all his stager, and that is C. A. Carter. Carter's Cure is a medicine that has been used for years, and is now being sold by the Dominion Department of Agriculture. It is a powerful medicine, and is used for the treatment of all kinds of diseases. It is a powerful medicine, and is used for the treatment of all kinds of diseases. A young lady with a pet dog on an electric car asked the conductor to stop at a certain point. When he did so, she went to the platform and there stood gesticulating, with the dog in her arm.

"Hurry up miss, hurry up! You want to get out here, don't you?" "Oh, dear no, thank you. I only wished to show Miss where his mother lives," Christian Register.

A Debt to the Navy

But for the British Navy War Would Have Been Over in Six Months

Whatever mobility, whatever power of recuperation and endurance the allies possess they owe first and foremost to the sea. But for the British navy, as we can all see now, the war would have been over in six months and Germany would have won. Defeat the British navy and all the hopes of the allies and all their achievements would even now crumble to nothingness. No disaster on land is altogether irreparable so long as we hold the sea. No triumph on land that we or any of our allies could win would be permanent if at the same time we ceased to be supreme on the oceans.

What the navy has accomplished in safeguarding the transport of 15,000,000 men and hundreds of millions of tons of materials; in making it possible for the allies to draw on the entire world of neutrals for all they have needed; in sweeping German commerce from the seas and pressing, with relentless finger upon "the main artery of German life; and in furnishing the protection under which our merchantmen have brought us and our allies not only the material of war but the means of life—all this is a tale the wonder and heroism of which, when it is fully told, will remain forever a precious part of the British heritage.—London Daily Mail.

Food in Jerusalem

In Jerusalem, bread costs 11 times as much as it did prior to the war. Petroleum costs 30 times as much as in 1914, and milk five times.

What Will It Do For Me?

YOU have heard of the great good this food cure is accomplishing for others. You have come to realize that nervous diseases do not right themselves, and therefore feel the necessity of some treatment to help you back to health and strength.

Now comes the all-important question as to what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will do for you.

Basing our answer on a knowledge of the restorative value of the ingredients contained in this food cure, and on the experience of those who have proven its curative powers under the most trying conditions, we want to tell you that—

It will make your blood rich and red.

It will nourish the starved nerve cells back to health and vigor.

Mrs. C. French, 104 Lansdowne street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "I was troubled with nervousness, sleeplessness, frequent headaches and indigestion. For many years I was troubled with nervousness and indigestion, causing me much loss of sleep. I was weak and out of my first sleep, even had I been asleep only five minutes. I would be awake for hours and could not get to sleep again. My sudden naps or a four slumbering would set my nerves going, and I would fear that something dreadful was going to happen. I had tried different remedies for this trouble, but without success. A friend asked me one day why I didn't try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, so I thought I would at least give it a trial. I secured some and commenced using them, and found they benefited me so much that I have taken fully a dozen boxes. My nervousness or indigestion is entirely cured. I can now eat and sleep well. I can recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food strongly, and would advise anyone suffering from nervous trouble of any kind to use them according to directions."

It will cure nervous headaches by removing the cause.

It will strengthen the action of the heart.

It will correct the weakness and inactivity of the digestive organs.

It will restore energy, ambition and confidence.

It will prevent the development of nervous prostration, paralysis and locomotor ataxia.

Why not put Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to the test? We know that the formula is right; We have proven to you by thousands of reports from cured ones that this treatment positively effects cure, even in the most complicated cases.

We cannot do more. It remains for you to make the test. You have everything to gain by using this building-up treatment, for it cannot fail to be of at least some benefit to you.

Social Meeting

At the regular monthly meeting of the above Association held at the School house, last Saturday afternoon, Feb. 2nd. The reports of the delegates to the 10th Annual Convention, which was held at Calgary from the 22nd to 25th January last, were made a special feature. This local sent its full quota of representatives, five in number, viz.: Messrs. I. C. Hubs, D. K. Fike, E. D. High, Geo. Kinney and Wm. Lowe. Each of these gentlemen, with the exception of Mr. Lowe (who was unwell), made an enthusiastic report of the doings at the Convention. Giving great praise to the arrangements for the comfort of the visitors to the people of the First Baptist Church, and the citizens of Calgary generally.

After the regular business was disposed of refreshments were served by the ladies of the organization. And a good old fashioned social time was enjoyed by all.

The room was comfortably filled with the families and friends of the Association. A similar meeting will be held on the afternoon of March 2nd, at which the special feature will be a talk on a seasonable topic by one of the members.

I will buy your Coyote and Rat Hides, bring them to me at Crossfield, or write me at Box 161, and I will call for them. GEO. M. PERRY.

The Food Question

Every pound added to the nourishing things to eat—animal or vegetable,—will count in this momentous year of 1918. No one should shrink taking up the work on a small plot through to incalculable ends of its value. Food control has to begin on the small scale. It will be chiefly effective through its thoroughness in the small but innumerable households in the land. So, if more foods can be grown on the home plot, no matter how small there will be a saving in exportable food and to that extent an increased amount of food will be released for shipment to the allies. Every new bushel of vegetables next spring and summer will release its equivalent in wheat. It is the drops of water in the ocean that go to make up the mighty tide of the Bay of Fundy. The essence of more production does not mean simply acres put to wheat, but more eatable things from each man's labor. A small area well looked after is often more profitable in an unfavorable season than a large area. An English farm is often measured downwards, i.e. by the depth of its productive soil, rather than valued for its sheer acreage.

Of the need for all exportable Canadian food products no one should longer be in doubt. The first of a series of fortnightly cablegrams from France to the Food Controller states with a plainness that would be pitiful if it were not so noble, how badly off the French civilians are. "The supply of foodstuffs is causing grave anxiety. Imports are very short. Our bread machinery has been completed but present lack of cereals will not permit of its application," it says. What does that mean? Simply that France is so short of bread that it cannot risk even a re-adjustment of what must be literally a hand-to-mouth system, lest some should starve. Yet France fights on gloriously! Surely a common pride in an ally fighting the bravest fight of all the ages should be enough to make anyone determine that in so far as in him lies he will aid such a noble race. The cablegram adds that sugar, farinaceous foods other than wheat, butter and meats are all dreadfully short and that oils and fats are practically unobtainable as the only one of the British Dominions practically accessible to cargo carriers, as it is manifestly "up to Canada to strain every nerve to increase the exportable quantities of these commodities so much needed overseas."

When Horses are Poisoned

When a horse, out at pasture or in the stall, is found staggering in a dazed condition with the pupils of the eyes dilated, it is usually apparent that he has eaten something that does not agree with him. The cause, of course, is not always the same. Bulletin No. 20, Scientific Service, of the Health of Animals Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, that can be had free on application to the Publications Branch of the Department, explains at least one cause of this state of things. The authors, Messrs. S. Hadwen, D.V.Sc. Pathologist, and E. A. Bruce, V.S., Assistant Pathologist, tell of experiments, by which it was found that bracken was frequently at fault. They say this disease known as "staggers" has been prevalent on the Pacific slope for many years, and then proceed to detail the results of their research. To show the serious nature of the complaint they quote an instance in which of 24 horses, owned by farmers, 16 died. Not only are the symptoms fully set forth, but the treatment that should be followed is given and the steps that should be taken for the eradication of the fern from the horse's feed, whether gathered in the field or supplied from the hayrack. The title of the bulletin is "The Poisoning of Horses by the Common Bracken."

Those figures have a vital significance to you.

Think for a moment of the exact temperature at which water boils.

Below that you have merely hot water—above it, part of the water becomes steam.

In years of motor car production on a gigantic scale, the Maxwell builders have learned:

(1) That, in building a car to sell for less than $1045, while materials cost what they do today, they would have to sacrifice something—efficiency, durability, economy, comfort, beauty or standard equipment, all of which the Maxwell possesses.

(2) That, in building a car to sell for more than $1045, they could give you no more practical value—but only increased size, weight or luxurious trappings.

They have found the point of definite motor car value, as fixed as the boiling point of water.

Think that over before you buy a car costing either more or less.
